Highlighting the night are two of the top feuds of 2024: CM Punk and Drew McIntyre meeting in a Hell in a Cell match, and Cody Rhodes and Roman Reigns putting their differences aside to go up against the new version of The Bloodline. Also on the schedule is The Judgment Day going up against the Terror Twins in two matches, and a rematch will take place for the WWE Women's Championship.

Hell in a Cell match: CM Punk vs. Drew McIntyre results

Drew McIntyre enters the ring first before his match with CM Punk.

CM Punk has also made his way to the ring and the cage door has been locked.

McIntyre was aggressive to start the match with several strikes before throwing him out of the ring.

Punk managed to reverse McIntyre's attack and brought out a table and chair from under the ring.

McIntyre would introduce a wrench from a toolbox under the ring into the match. Punk grabs a hold of the wrench and starts digging into McIntyre's head with it.

McIntyre would respond taking several shots to Punk's head with steel ringside steps and causing him to bleed. McIntyre had promised in recent weeks he was going to make Punk bleed during their match.

Record producer and songwriter Metro Boomin appeared at the start of Bad Blood arriving with WWE Champion Cody Rhodes. He was also seen in a photo with WWE chief content officer Paul "Triple H" Levesque on social media. WWE is using Metro Boomin and Future's song "GTA" as the theme song for Bad Blood
